August is here and I am amazed to say that my time in Asia is winding down. Living in Bangalore, India for six weeks has been interesting and fun. One pleasant thing is that the weather here has generally been milder than the heat wave affecting the Northeastern part of the United States. I spent most of July gathering material for future podcasts, experimenting a lot with video, blogging a lot and getting more than my fill of Indian food.

In July I wrote and posted blog entries titled:

- Musings on developing a style
- War stories, \(in two parts\)
- Who are the next victims of creative destruction?
- Fading Fast

I also posted two new podcasts:

"A public radio interview with David H. Wells," uses the audio from a 1992 interview with Melinda Whiting for Artscape, a public radio arts and culture program in Philadelphia, to discuss my work from the Middle East as well as the intersection between art and photojournalism.

"Rolling, time," offers a new perspective on an adrenaline-filled motorcycle ride through the streets of Providence, Rhode Island."

Photos from those podcasts are part of this newsletter.

Leaving India has me thinking about my next overseas adventure coming up in Prague, where I will be teaching my favorite Photo Essay workshop in early November. You can read more about that at: <http://www.pragueworkshops.com/workshop/photo-essay>

I have also started blogging for B + H InSights, their company blog and product information portal. You can read my first two blog-entries, which are not available on the Wells Point at: <http://photography.bhinsights.com/content/zen-and-art-photography-maintenance.html> and <http://photography.bhinsights.com/content/new-toys-old-strategies.html> Because B + H is such a large presence in photography, the reaction has been pretty dramatic.

Speaking of B + H, I am debuting the very first presentation of a new talk I am assembling called "The Photo Essay: Old and New," at their Event Space in New York City on Sunday, August 15, 2010. I will begin by sharing earlier photo essays and then show examples of my newest multimedia work, and discuss how I have embraced the latest technologies to tell stories in interesting and compelling new ways. Read more about that at: <http://www.bhphotovideo.com/c/find/eventDetails.jsp/id/756>

You can always find the latest on all my upcoming teaching on the workshops page of my web-site at: <http://www.davidhwells.com/workshops/index.html>

I hope you enjoyed my latest monthly newsletter. I welcome your feedback. If you know people who would be interested in getting these, please encourage them to sign up at <http://thewellspoint.com/wp-login.php?action=register>
