November was one big road trip for me, starting in Morocco with a great workshop and ending in California where I enjoyed the Thanksgiving holiday with my family. Speaking of travel, early next year I will be leading a fascinating workshop to my favorite place, India. The class, NORTH INDIA: Through the Lens, runs February 12th to 27th of 2015. While folks in the Northeastern U.S. are struggling through cold and grim winter weather, I will be enjoying the warmth and magical light of North India, so consider joining me. Sign up soon since there are only a few spots left. Images from my previous trips to India are interspersed throughout this newsletter.

In November, two of my recent videos were posted to the web.

My video on the Chocolate Delicacy in East Greenwich, Rhode Island (which was produced on assignment for Edible Rhody) gives a behind the scenes tour of what goes into making deliciously handmade confections.

If you are looking for a holiday gift (for yourself or another photographer) consider buying my wife Annu's book of photographs from India. The book is the byproduct of the brilliant publishing idea, a series of photography books.

organized by Chris Rauschenberg at Blue Sky Gallery in Portland, Oregon. Annu's book Memories of India features an eloquent essay by Vicki Goldberg.
