Hi:

It has been relaxing to be home for the last two weeks of May after a lightening fast trip to Hong Kong and Guangzhou, China. I went to accompany my wife as she participated in the 2009 Guangzhou Photo Biennial. China was interesting, especially in comparison to India, the Asian country that I have the strongest connection with.

If you read my blog regularly you will have read about my experiences in China in recent entries titled: "China vs India: Politically, photographically and especially briefly" and "China, India and a bit on how I see them both." Going far away also prompted me to think about art on a grander scale, resulting in an entry titled: "Expanding thoughts on the question "is photography art?" To read the latest blog entries, start at: <http://thewellspoint.com/category/general/>

In May, I posted two new podcasts, one exploring the chaotic nature of road traffic in Bangalore, India and another on the basics of capturing images for a time-lapse animation project. Here are a couple images from those two podcasts.

All the podcasts on The Wells Point are based on what I teach in my workshops.

I am about to start my summer workshop season with stops in Montana, Maine, California and Greece. I have also recently posted some new workshops, including one of my favorites, photographing the Tucson Rodeo. You can always read about my coming workshops at: <http://www.davidhwells.com/workshops/index.html>

Apparently, in my last newsletter I sent a faulty link to the information about the latest exhibition of my work from India, titled "Concurrence: An Evolving India." The work explores the fluctuating encounter between the eternal and the modern in India. You can see some of that work at http://www.davidhwells.com/docuuIndiaExhibit/index.html#_self If you want more information on the exhibit in New York City, starting July 6th and concluding with an artist's reception, July 28th, go to: <http://guest.cvent.com/EVENTS/Info/Summary.aspx?e=eae075a6-ffe6-41a4-9927-346f0e661871>

I hope you enjoy my monthly newsletters. I welcome your feedback and ideas for blog entries and/or podcasts. Some of the new blog entries came right out of comments that readers sent me. If you know people who would be interested in getting these, please encourage them to sign up at <http://thewellspoint.com/wp-login.php?action=register>

Thanks,

David H. Wells
