Hi:

The latest news from the Wells point is that the galleries of student work are now open for comments. The Wells point site is becoming an ongoing conversation about photography so look at the work at <http://thewellspoint.com/gallery/>, click on any gallery that catches your attention and chime in with a comment or two. If you have taken a class with me before and would like to see your work from that class on The Wells Point, contact me by e-mail.

In terms of new pod casts, in September, I posted "Mountain, time," where I use audio, images and animation to take you to the mountains of Guatemala. See that at: <http://thewellspoint.com/2009/09/09/mountain-time/> Here is one of my favorite images from that pod cast:

I also posted a new pod cast, "The executive portrait, a.k.a., "the five minute drill," which goes on location with me as I make an executive portrait on assignment for a magazine. See that at:

Speaking of magazine work, I was thrilled to be included in the ASMP's (American Society of Media Photographers) print and web articles on "the Best of ASMP in 2009." The September edition of the printed ASMP bulletin included a short article about my work and that of 19 other ASMP members (selected out of 100 applications.) The web version was recently posted and it goes into much greater detail. You can see that starting at: <http://asmp.org/articles/best-2009-wells.html>

The second article that I wrote for the on-line resource, Olympus Visonage, was just posted. It explores flash photography and especially off camera flash. It can be seen at: http://www.pdnonline.com/pdn/cp/olympus/technology/article_display.jsp?vnu_content_id=1004012161

In other news, my class photographing the Tucson Rodeo is filling up. If you are thinking of joining me in sunny Arizona, February 21 to 24, 2010 start at: <http://www.davidhwells.com/Rodeo/index.html> There is a discount if you pay before December 1, 2009.

Similarly, my India class is also filling up. That class, Light, Shadow, Twilight and Night, involves photographing in and around Chennai, in southern India, It runs Dec. 12th to 16th, 2009. The sponsoring organization (Objectifs Centre for Photography and Filmmaking of Singapore) will close the registration in mid October.
