---

March has finally arrived and yet the cold is still blanketing the Northeast US. After a great eight days in warm and sunny California and Arizona, I am back in chilly New England. In between my workshop focused on the Tucson Rodeo and photographing more for my "Foreclosed Dreams" project, I have been busily adding material to The Wells Point.

In February, I posted blog entries about camera insurance, Darwinian competition among photographers, and naming conventions.

I also posted two new podcasts:

* "Reflecting on Vietnam," explores my personal experience encountering that country for the first time; this was my second all-video pod cast and was made with an Olympus E-P1, a new camera I am developing a strong attachment to. Some still images from Vietnam are interspersed throughout this newsletter.

*"Using the best tripod, which is a table-top tripod," focused on the craft of photography.

Speaking of tripods, my recent article on table top tripods, titled "Smaller is Better: Using a tabletop tripod far beyond the tabletop" was just posted at: http://www.pdnonline.com/pdn/cp/olympus/technology/article\_display.jsp?vnu\_content\_id=1004067351

I am very pleased to report that I'll be teaching a workshop in Prague in this November! I was in that beautiful city years ago and I am looking forward to seeing it again. You can read more about that workshop at: <http://www.pragueworkshops.com/workshop/photo-essay>

Photographs made by my students during the workshop that I lead in India in December have been turned into an exhibition, which I curated, called "Chennai Chutney." The show which opened recently in Singapore, features images by the workshop participants - Birgit Voogt, Eleanor Ng, Karen and Laurie Murrell, Duff Hughes, Ulla Gratton, Chia Yan Wei and Su Yen Chen. A very nice presentation of my work exploring globalization in South Asia was recently posted at: <http://tiffinbox.org/global-and-eternal-south-asia/>

I hope you enjoyed my latest monthly newsletter. I welcome your feedback. If you know people who would be interested in getting these, please encourage them to sign up at: <http://thewellspoint.com/wp-login.php?action=register>
